OUR OTTAWA LETTER.

The Canada Central Fair and the Central Experimental Farm.

Hon. Jno. Carling and His Speech on the Growing of Canadian Barley.

From Our Own Correspondent.]

Ottawa, Ont. Sept. 15.—In my letter of last week I referred to the annual meeting of the D. R. A., which was then closing a very successful week's run. During the past week I took in the annual Central Canada fair, which held its inaugural meeting last year. Although still in its swaddling bands it has won for itself a local habitation and a name. For the five days it was going on there were over 35,000 persons through the turnstiles, but if children, who were admitted for half price, officials, exhibitors and others who held complimentary tickets were enumerated, the attendance must have amounted to not less than 45,000 people. When it is taken into consideration that the Toronto fair, the Provincial at London, and the Sherbrooke exhibition were all going on at the same time this must be considered very satisfactory. In regard to entries they exceed last year by nearly 60 per cent. One of the features of the exhibition in the way of drawing a crowd was "the leap for life" by Professor Reynaud. This consisted in his dive from a tower, specially erected for the purpose, 150 ft. high in a net placed a few feet from the ground. In fact the general crowd who attend fairs now-a-days go purely for the acrobatic feats, balloon ascensions and other blood curdling performances, which are supplied to meet their tastes. They take little interest in the stock-yards, agricultural hall and general exhibits. Clergymen may denounce the committee of the exhibition, as they have done here during the past week or two, yet instead of preventing people from attending the fair these demonstrations seem to have a very opposite effect. While the public demands these things just so long will management committees of exhibitions cater to their taste.

THE EXPERIMENTAL FARM.

As I briefly wired THE TIMES at the time, Hon. John Carling formally opened the exhibition. Mr. Carling is no orator yet his long experience in politics has taught him to be able to address a crowd with a considerable degree of ease, if not effect. His one great hobby is the central experimental farm and its branches. No distinguished stranger that comes to Ottawa, and who the Minister of Agriculture is introduced to, but the latter invites him to a visit to the farm. The idea of experimental farms, if rightly managed, is a good one. In the present instance it is to be feared that the Ottawa experimental farm costs far too much for the good that it renders the country. It is very singular that notwithstanding all the money that has been spent on the farm no exhibit was able to be sent to the Canada Central fair, held right at its gates. The officers of the farm, who are not practical farmers but professor this or that as the case may be, live in affluence and occupy palatial residences. Indeed, it is freely asserted that the farm is used more for their personal interests than for the benefits of the agricultural community. An inquiry into the whole working of the institution would be a desirable thing.

HON. JOHN CARLING'S SPEECH.

Next to the experimental farm, if, indeed, not ahead of it, the Minister of Agriculture has an eye to, although not a taste for, Carling's ales. This was no doubt the reason why he devoted nearly the whole of his speech at the opening of the exhibition to the growing of barley. He urged the farmers of Canada to give up the growing of four-rowed and six-rowed barley and turn their attention to two-rowed barley, so that they might be able to dispose of their product in England. Mr. Carling showed that the brewers of England preferred two-rowed barley, and that he himself had a brewing of the English barley made alongside another of the Canadian barley and the result was that the English barley produced 13 per cent. more beer than the Canadian barley. He admits, however, that the Canadian barley is suitable for the American market. Such being the case, it would be far more advantageous to the farmers of this country if the Minister of Agriculture and his colleagues would endeavor to obtain reciprocity with the States, thereby opening up a market of 60,000,000 people for the Canadian agriculturists. The Canadian farmer grows four-rowed and six-rowed barley because they give a larger yield per acre than the English barley, and all that is required is the removal of the American duty to make the growing of these profitable to our farmers.

SIR JOHN'S OLD STORY.

This reminds one of the talk indulged in by Sir John Macdonald when seeking to oust the Liberal government in 1878. He drew a picture of the two farmers, one on the Canadian side of the St. Lawrence and the other on the American side. The Yankee farmer got a dollar a bushel for his barley, while the Canadian farmer only received 85 cents, the other 15 cents being paid to a customs official for the privilege of selling Canadian barley in the United States. If the people of Canada were to elect him (Sir John) and his party, this state of things was to be abolished. Did they do so? Certainly not; but on the other hand they brand as traitors all who seek to secure this market for the Canadian farmer. The position then taken by Sir John Macdonald was a correct one, but his actions since obtaining office have been wholly indefensible. The Americans have reduced the duty on barley to 10 cents, yet the Canadian government keep it at 15 cents, notwithstanding that little or no barley is imported here while the only market Canadians have for their barley is in the United States.

NORTHWEST RAILWAY PROJECT.

A wealthy syndicate of English capitalists have arranged with the Canadian shareholders of the Great Northwest Central railway to build that road from Brandon to Battleford. This is the route surveyed by the Mackenzie government for the construction of the Canadian Pacific, but which was afterwards changed by the present administration. Fifty miles of the road from Brandon will be completed this fall and the remainder of the road to Battleford will be built next year. In conversation with one of the representatives of this syndicate I learn that it is intended in the near future to extend the road to the Peace River country and ultimately it may be carried on right to the Pacific coast. A glance at the map will show that this is a most feasible scheme being a straight road through the most fertile belts of the northwest.

VICE-REGAL.

His Excellency, the Governor-General, arrived here on Monday and will proceed on the following day to the Pacific coast. He will be accompanied by Lady Stanley and suite. That his stay in Ottawa was so brief was due to Rideau Hall being under repairs. How long his trip will extend has not yet definitely been decided.

HALDIMAND COUNTY.

There will be another election in Haldimand County before the next session of parliament, if the case of unseating Mr. Colter is not taken to the Supreme Court. Haldimand is the great fighting grounds of both parties. One time it is Dr. Montague who is unseated and another time it is Mr. Colter.

EDM'D YATES' LETTER.

Unhappy Czar—Nihilists Still Hunting Him—A Bomb Kills an Attendant.

By Postal Telegraph.]

New York, Sept. 24—Edmund Yates' London cable to the Tribune: The Queen has decided to postpone her contemplated visit to Strath Pfeffer till next year. So Her Majesty will remain at Balmoral until she comes to Windsor in November. The Queen will probably get to Aix-les-Baines early in the spring.

The health of the Prince of Wales has so far improved that the apprehension felt by his relatives as to the existence of blood which caused so much anxiety a month ago, are for the moment allayed.

Unless something unforseen occurs Prince Albert Victor's Indian programme will be carried out but the Prince of Wales has been warned of the probable consequence of any undue exertion while in Scotland. He is advised to take as much rest as possible during his coming visit to Greece.

Prince Christian Victor, of Schleswig-Holstein, who has been at Balmoral for a fortnight, has gone back to his regiment. He has had a good deal of shooting and deer stalking, of which he is very fond, and he is a good shot. He is one of the sturdiest and most athletic of the Royal family, being very strong and fond of all out-door amusement. He is moreover a very a good fellow and very popular in his regiment.

The wonderful luck of the Duke of Portland has apparently not been exhausted, for Donovan's victory in the Lancashire plate on Saturday brings the total of the Duke's winnings, since the beginning of the last season up to within a fraction of £100,000, of which sum Donovan has contributed nearly one half. Donovan has quite put into the shade that of Ayrshire, who won about £38,000 in the course of his season, whereas Donovan who apparently still has a long and most prosperous future before him has already placed about £55,000 to his owner's credit. He won eleven races out of thirteen as a two-year o'd, and this season, save for his Fluky defeat in the Two Thousand Guineas, he has carried all before him, winning the Prince of Wales stake, £1,000, a Leicester, Newmarket stakes, the Derby, Prince of Wales stakes, Ascot, Doncaster stakes, and now the Lincolnshire Plate, winning them all easily, too. His last achievement was probably the best, for Chitabob was so lame he could hardly hobble to Doncaster station the week before. He came round with surprising rapidity and was well suited at seven furlongs at Manchester.

FIENDS' WORK.

Oshkosh, Wis., Sept. 24.—A desperate attempt was made to wreck the Wisconsin Central passenger train near this place by placing obstructions on the track. A party of hunters passing by saw the work and signalled the train in time to prevent a wreck. There is no clue to the desperadoes.

TRAIN IN LIMBO.

Boston, Sept. 24.—George Francis Train was arrested at the Tremont House this morning on a suit for debt brought by Oscar M. Spiller, of Toledo. The debt is $1000 contracted many years ago

MURDERED HIS EMPLOYER.

Marinette, Wis., Sept. 24.—Charles Sleigbetz to-day killed his employer, Sol. E. Felch, owner of the Kirby House at Iron Mountain, Mich., at the Indian camp on the latter's farm. The murderer was captured by Indians and held until officers arrived. While he was being taken to jail the officers had great difficulty in shielding the prisoner from the mob, who were bent on lynching him.

A BRAVE MAN KILLED.

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 24.—A train on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad was wrecked near here last night. The train was heavily loaded with Cornell students and excursionists from the Elmira fair. Engineer Orlando Seely was buried under the ruins of the cab, his head being nearly severed from his body, but his right hand firmly grasped the throttle. Had it not been for the bravery of Seely, the loss of life would have been greater.

BOODLER ARRESTED.

New York, Sept. 24.—Simon Baruck, an ex-employe of the war department of the Austrian government, has been arrested at Hoboken for the theft of 300,000 guilders of the war department's money.

CORN PALACE OPENED.

Sioux City, Iowa, Sept. 24.—The doors of the corn palace were formally opened at noon to-day. There was a light drizzle all day and the attendance was mostly confined to people from the surrounding country.

CANCELLING BONDS.

New York, Sept. 24.—It is rumored here that the Manitoba company contemplates the cancellation of a certain amount of bonds on January 1st, which will reduce the fixed charges per mile to about nine hundred dollars.

THE WHITECHAPEL VICTIM.

London, Sept. 24.—The coroner's jury after waiting two weeks for some light to be thrown on the latest Whitechapel murder, met again to-day and were obliged to bring in a verdict that the victim whose mutilated body was found on Sept. 10th came to her death by the hands of some person unknown. The identity of the woman still remains unestablished and this murder is even more of a mystery than its predecessors.

FUTURE OF MONTE CARLO.

London, Sept. 24.—The death of Prince Monaco is causing great anxiety respecting the future of Monte Carlo, where extensive alterations are in contemplation, which will surprise future visitors to this fever stricken spot, provided the tables are allowed to play their games as heretofore, by the present successor to the titles, and the one of Grimaldi principality.

HOW S. H. VIEWS IT.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 23.—Hon. S. H. Blake told his bible class yesterday, while commenting on the Hungarian dancers at the recent exhibition here, that he would sooner be in Sodom and Gomorrah than be a director in the exhibition and that it should have been opened with prayer.

THE UNIVERSITY SCHEME.

London, Sept. 23.—Chief Secretary Balfour, in reply to a letter received from the secretary of the Protestant Alliance, denouncing the scheme for a Catholic university in Dublin, writes; A foundation endowment of the university has never been contemplated, and in my opinion is not necessary. The public ought to suspend opinion on the plans of the government till the plans of the government are made known.

THE NEW MINISTER TO HAYTI.

Washington, Sept. 23.—The state department has taken steps to prevent Frederick Douglas being subjected to any inconvenience in travelling on account of his color while on his way to assume his duties as minister of the United States to Hayti. The U. S. S. Dispatch will convey Mr. Douglas from Washington to Fortress Monroe, a distance of little more than 200 miles, and thence he will proceed to Hayti, as has been already stated on the Ossipee. Mr. Douglas, in an interview, said he might be subjected to some inconvenience while going to Fortress Monroe, and the state department secured the Dispatch from the navy department to prevent such a possibility.

INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS.

Delegates From South America Seeking U. S. Trade.

New York, Sept. 24.—At six o'clock this morning the reception committee composed of Charles R. Flint, commissioner of the International American Congress, F. A. Perossa, G. F. Bassett, C. B. Corwin and G. B. Fowler boarded the revenue cutter Manhattan and steamed down to Quarantine where they met the City of Para and took off the South American delegates to the International Congress. The party on the City of Para consisted of the following gentlemen: Dr. Jacinto Castelano, delegate from San Salvador; Dr. Joaquin Arrietta Rossi, attache; Samuel Valdioceo, secretary; Senor Juan Francisco Velardo, delegate from Bolivia; Aliciba Desvelardo and Mariano Velardo, attaches; Geronimo Zelapa, delegate from Honduras, and E. C. Fiallos, secretary. Ex-Minister Roberts from Chili and Julio M. Foster, of Santiago, Chili, were also taken on board the cutter. The party on arriving at the Barge office took carriages and were driven to their hotel. They will leave for Washington in a few days.

In conversation with Senor Zelapa, delegate from Honduras, that gentleman said: "Our people are very enthusiastic over this international congress and expect many advantages to result from it. We wish to develop our agricultural interests, but our mines are what we want to see in operation as soon as possible. We need railroads and an enlargement of our commerce with foreign countries, especially the United States. All classes in our country desire closer relations with your people." In speaking of the present foreign trade of Honduras, he said "it was now controlled by England and France, and that these countries are reaping great benefits and were opposed to the opening up of all South American countries by others than themselves, and that one main result hoped for by his countrymen from this congress was an immediate influx of American trade and American enterprise in developing these countries."

Senor Juan Francisco Velardo said in relation to Bolivia: "We wish to develop our mining and agricultural interests. Mining is the principal industry and always will be. We have rich gold and silver mines. Our copper mines are equal to any and we have one of the richest tin deposits in the world. England monopolizes the trade of our country, and of course will not advance our industries to the injury of her own. What we wish is to have the United States to be our principal commercial connection."

BURNING THEM OUT.

A New Phase of Dealing With the Social Evil.

Ogden, Utah, Sept. 24.—A disreputable resort on Twenty-Eighth street was entirely destroyed by fire early this morning. The inmates barely escaped with their lives and one woman is expected to die from exposure. The loss is fully $17,000; insurance about half that amount. The fire was certainly the work of an incendiary. There appears to be an organization here to burn out the houses of ill-repute. A few days since the new variety theatre was entirely destroyed, and that was also a clear case of arson. It is reported that an organization of women has been formed for the purpose of destroying these places.

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

All the Money Gone, and Powderly Looking for a New Job.

Pittsburg, Sept. 23.—The Ledger will publish a story to-morrow on reliable authority, to the effect that the entire executive board of the Knights of Labor have been suspended because of their being no money in the general treasury to pay their salaries, also that all the general lecturers, with the possible exception of Write, have been called in for the same reason.

Powderly is said to be preparing his resignation, which he will present to the general assembly in Atlanta in November, for the reason that he is not getting his salary. He will then begin the practice of law.

THE ODD FELLOWS.

A Good Deal of Business Disposed Of—The Drill Prizes.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 23.—The Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows today rushed through a great deal of work. Grand Sire Underwood is still confined to his room. Representative Kuykendall, of Wyoming, presided. The next meeting will be held at Topeka. It was decided that hereafter the uniforms of Patriarchs Militant must be all alike and not subject to change. Odd Fellows' memorial day was changed from October 20th to the second Tuesday in June.

The constitution was amended to provide for the election of officers of the sovereign grand lodge annually instead of biennially, and to permit state and territorial grand lodges to make laws disqualifying persons engaged in the sale of intoxicating beverages for membership in the order. A resolution providing for an eighteen-year membership amendment, to lay over until next session, was rejected.

TRAFFIC IN CHINESE WOMEN.

The Exclusion Law Powerless to Remedy the Evil.

San Francisco, Sept 23.—The traffic in Chinese women for immoral purposes is again on the increase in this city. Every Chinese steamer brings a large number of Chinawomen, who are immediately released by habeas corpus process, upon testimony of Chinese, and are then sold into bondage and placed in disreputable houses, where they earn a livelihood for their owners.

Upon the arrival of steamers alleged Chinese merchants go before the United States court commissioners, or secure writs of habeas corpus on the ground that the women are their wives. No contradictory evidence being obtainable, the customs authorities are forced to allow the women to land on this perjured testimony. The surveyor of the port has officially notified the collector the port of these facts, and furnished him with all the information in his possession.

Collector Phelps has taken up the matter, and proposes, if possible, to prevent these women from securing their release on such flimsy testimony.

These women are purchased in China for from $100 to $300. Upon arrival here they are sold at as high a price as $1500, and placed by the new owner in disreputable places, where they live a life of shame.

To-day an address will be read to his excellency by the city council. A regatta was held this afternoon, and this evening there will be a state dinner, followed by a grand levee at the parliament buildings.

A FALLING CITY.

A Whole Quebec Street Sliding to Destruction.

Special to THE TIMES.]

Quebec, Sept. 24.—Dennis Berigan, son of Michael Timothy Berigan, who succumbed to wounds received in the recent land slide died to-day. The remains of several victims were recovered yesterday and were buried to-day. Several engineers and scientific men have surveyed the terrace and adjoining rocks. They examined the newly discovered crack, which runs 200 feet under the southwest end of Dufferin terrace. That fissure was three days ago but a few inches wide and is now about five feet wide and some fifty feet deep. Not only houses on Champlain street, adjoining the heap of ruins, but all the houses on both sides and the whole length of the street numbering about ninety are being deserted.

KEMP FOUND ALIVE.

At nine o'clock this morning, laborers working at the land slide, found the man, Jos. Kemp, who was heard on Saturday, but who again was hidden by falling in the ruins. Kemp was still alive and able to speak. Stimulants were administered and the doctor thinks he may recover. He is 72 years of age and had been buried 108 hours. The corpse of Mrs. O'Dowd, who was 73 years old, was found to-day badly mutilated. More bodies are likely to be recovered to-day. Intense excitement prevails about the ruins and the police have formed a cordon to keep the people back. At 10 o'clock this morning an inquest into the cause of death of the victims began. The number dead now is 48.

UNHAPPY CZAR.

A Chest of Dynamite Explodes But He Escapes.

London, Sept. 24.—The fact, though suppressed by the authorities, has come to light, that on the occasion of the Czar's departure for Copenhagen, a chest of dynamite exploded in the railway station at Peterhoff, killing a signal man and wounding several other persons.

The explosion occurred just previous to the Czar's arrival at the station from Peterhoff palace, and was probably premature, as it is undeniable from circumstances connected with the affair that the persons who placed the chest in the station did so with the intention of exploding its contents when his majesty appeared.

PARNELL COMMISSION.

Proceedings will be Opened with a Speech from Sexton.

London, Sept. 24.—When the Parnell-Times commission re-assembles next month. Mr. Sexton will open the proceedings with a speech in behalf of the Irish members of parliament that instructed their counsel to withdraw from the court room during the last session. From the fact that Sexton announces that for the next two weeks he will be busily engaged in preparing the speech and in consulting with his colleagues the address is likely to be a brilliant one.

He is getting over his cold and coming back to condition again, but will do no wrestling till he can toss the 250 pound Indian club.

THE FIREMEN'S TOURNAMENT.

The injunction to restrain Chief Rainey from paying over to the Astoria fire company the $1,000 as the first prize in the wet test hose race, has been withdrawn by the Vancouver company and the money has been paid over to Astoria. The prize however can be of but temporary satisfaction to the winners as they did not get it fairly. It was Vancouver's by rights.

THE PARK.

It is useless to argue with the Colonist on the question of a park, because either it is ignorant of the features which should distinguish a park or it is determined to voice the prejudice of a few. The Colonist has been spoiling for a row with the city council, and the mayor too, for some time, and now that the improvements on the park have begun in earnest, it proposes to try conclusions. Whether it will succeed or not time alone can tell, but it is pretty safe to say that if the coterie who inspired the Colonist to blackguard the mayor last winter were managing the park business, instead of factions grumbling we should hear nothing but fulsome laudation. It is to be regretted that from the Colonist's point of view no good can come out of Israel with reference to municipal affairs. We can make al lowance for the puerile criticisms which have appeared in its columns under the head of correspondence, for we know that they have emanated from as dense a lot of critics as ever sunned themselves on the primeval rocks of Marvin's hill or skulked through the fern which once characterized the locality of Fountain lake; but the Colonist, we should suppose, speaking to the people, would hesitate to stultify itself, or put itself on record as determined to rule or ruin. With reference to the phrase, "There is a large number of citizens who are not willing to accept the authority of two men," we will say, unless these "citizens" have a practical knowledge of what they are talking about they are not competent critics. The editor of the Colonist would resent on the instant a protest coming from a delegation of lawyers to the effect that he did not know how to conduct a newspaper, and his resentment would be just. Nevertheless, he proposes to put the dictum of TOM, DICK and HARRY, men who know nothing about landscape gardening, against that of Mr. BLAIR, a man who has made the business a life-long study. If "these large number of citizens" are capable of intelligent criticism of the works now going on at the park, let them show their credentials or forever hold their peace. Now, in regard to nature vs. art, in respect to Beacon Hill, we have to say that nature outside of making the park an excellent point of observation has not been very liberal in the matter of local attractions. Beacon Hill Park is a park of possibilities not of actualities. Beacon Hill itself is not a picturesque locality. The chief beauty of a park lies in its picturesqueness, its local novelties, the embodying within its compass of as many as possible of the striking features of nature. Unless this is done a fair ground or race course answers all the purposes of a park. Beacon Hill, fortunately, owing to its topography admits of further additions to its attractions without straining for effect. The park, in other words, can be relieved of monotony, be made, at trifling expense comparatively, to exemplify a variety of the most striking features of nature. Crude nature, however delightful to some people, does not supply a long felt want with everybody. Not everybody is infatuated with diamonds in the rough. If "these citizens" whom the Colonist has in mind are so fond of crude nature, diamonds in the rough, permit us to suggest that they undertake to gratify their predilections by seeking the picturesque haunts of the aboriginal Siwash. But delightful as are the natural and social conditions afforded by the Siwash most people prefer polish. They prefer steamboats to canoes, the frame house to the log cabin, the trimmed grove to the thicket, the wagon road to the trail. They prefer to see nature toned up or toned down, whichever way you may please to style it. Parks, therefore, to answer the requirements of the general run of humanity must be retouched. Parks in a word should suggest nature, not realise it. Take the Olympian range of mountains for instance. The satisfaction we derive from the contemplation of them lies almost exclusively in the fact that they are 25 miles away.

"'Tis distance lends enchantment to the view,
And robes the mountain with an azure hue."

This couplet tells the whole story. The Olympian mountains are things of beauty at a distance; proximity makes them as hideous to the sight as the glittering drop of water under the microscope. To the half savage mind, the desolate topography of Marvin's Hill may have a soothing, restful effect, but the civilized person will derive greater satisfaction at the sight of it clothed with verdure. Of drives, who would have a park without them? The art editor of the Colonist will have none of them. He prefers a foot path, and some sodden shade where he can humor his antigregarious instincts. We never understood that a park was for ether than social purposes. "The sad, sad city by the sea" Victorians repudiate, and yet it is proposed to dedicate a grove to sullen insularity. A park is necessarily composite. It can't be anything else and be popular. The Colonist speaks of springy turf. This is a feature of which the park is emphatically lacking, taken as a whole. Springy turf means soil. This kind of soil is being carted from a considerable distance and distributed in barren places in order that there may be springy turf for the Colonist to gaze upon and perambulate over. If there is any one thing the Colonist don't want to do, it is to get poetical over springy turf. Beacon Hill Park is founded on a rock, and not on springy turf. As to race tracks and beer-gardens, these are matters of municipal regulation. In this respect the Colonist should not reveal what is uppermost in its mind, until it has cause. In so doing it simply anticipates a condition which it knows in its own mind is impossible.

LILLOOET.

The goody-goody phraseology which the Colonist manages to inject into its political lucubrations evidently found congenial lodgment in the breasts of the Lillooetites, for they returned an "Honest JOHN" man to the local house in preference to Mr. SAUL. What balm this result is to those who were sitting on the political anxious seat! What broad grins passed between the occupants of the Colonist sanctum last night, and with what loving care may we suppose those cabalistic words, the "good things coming," have been extracted from that famous editorial, to be framed perhaps and hung on the wall over the editorial chair to supplant the motto, "Be virtuous and you'll be happy," or "To the victors belong the spoils." And now we would like to know the apportionment of good things which Lillooet is going to get. Will "Honest JOHN" put Lillooet off as she toddles after him for a grip on the pap bottle with the sage remark that inasmuch as the district is pretty well supplied with bridges she will have to derive the greater part of her recompense from her inner sense of conscious rectitude and the childlike faith she manifested in the present regime? "The good things coming." Poor old Lillooet! She'll get them. We see her wax and grow fat. Lillooet! Lillooet! Thou canst not discern thy right hand from thy left.

RECIPROCITY OR PROTECTION

Judging from the nature of the evidence given before the U. S. Senate Commission on relations with Canada, there is a strong sentiment in the State of Massachusetts in favor of commercial reciprocity. W. O. BLAMEY, of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, expressed the opinion that commercial reciprocity should be in operation from Hudson's Bay to Patagonia. Other gentlemen representing various industries practically endorsed this somewhat comprehensive view, and altogether from the way things are shaping themselves, we should not be surprised to see the States next year offer reciprocal trade relations to Canada. But what will Canada do in such a case? If we may believe the Globe and other influential Canadian journals, Canada will reciprocate, although it must not be understood for an instant that the "national policy" party is not a large and active minority, and if led by Sir JOHN will prove extremely formidable. The subject of reciprocity is one which admits of a good deal being said for and against. Protection may be resolved down into a simple case of monopoly. It is a case of the manufacturers versus the people. It is a financial proposition by which hundreds of men are benefitted at the expense of thousands. It has none of the elements of fairness about it. Protection, in a word, is an immense trust sanctioned by the government. It would be unfortunate, indeed, if reciprocity should work injury to Canada. There is no probability of such a contingency however. It is a false idea the development of an industry which benefits the few to the detriment of the many. Furthermore, there is no good reason why Canadians should not be able to produce as cheaply as the Americans. Labor is as cheap in Canada as in the States, water power is as plentiful, and so is fuel. In this latter respect, in fact, Canada is even better provided than her southern neighbor. What rational objection, then, can be offered against reciprocity? It will be urged, perhaps, that the Americans producing more than Canadians, can produce cheaper. There is something in this contention no doubt, but then we have an offset in the shape of transportation charges. But we are not to consider reciprocity from the manufacturers side of the case wholly. These are but a fraction of the body politic. We have the interests of the farmers to consider. Reciprocity, besides enabling the farmer to purchase cheaper throws open the market of the States to their produce. This is a phase of the case which cannot be ignored. The prosperity of the farmer element is the criterion of the prosperity of the nation. The farmers constitute the majority, and consequently whatever is to their interest is of national interest. Now, when we recollect that protection circumscribes the farmers' market, the duty imposed by the Americans on farm produce being simply an assessment for the privilege of selling, we not only are made to understand the advantages of free trade but we are made aware that protection instead of developing a country is really nothing more or less than a parasite. There can be no doubt of the people of Canada having reached the conclusion that reciprocity is emphatically in their interest, and doubtless so soon as they have the opportunity they will elect to enter upon some species of trade relations with the States, which will prove of real advantage to them. Continued discussion of the question has educated them to a better understanding of what reciprocity really means, and the politician who endeavors to ride into office next year on the protection horse must be an agile equestrian to keep his seat. Nor is it likely that Sir JOHN will undertake to ride the protection nag any longer. The rumor is abroad already, that he contemplates swapping the monopoly hack which he has rode so long and so well for the reciprocity pacer. This possibly is the cause of the flutter among local politicians. Small wonder that they are endeavoring to bring about a coalescence of the conservative with the liberal element of this province. Too late, gentlemen, too late! Your disposition to recant at the eleventh hour is too thin. Your death bed repentance may secure for you a decent amount of commiseration, but it can never inspire confidence. You must be content to meander about in the purgatory of private life. A few years of pondering over the protection tweedle-dum and the reciprocity tweedle-dee will fit you for higher political spheres in case you should ever again venture to come before the people.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Prince BISMARCK proposes to devote the next session of the Reichstag to the enactment of laws dealing with strikes and lockouts. While perfectly prepared to recognize the right of both the employers and employed to form unions for the furtherance of their respective interests, he is determined to visit with the most severe penalties all professional agitators who seek to interfere between the employers and their men. BISMARCK is an iron man, and it will be interesting to note his success in wrestling with this great problem.

One of the incomprehensible fads of the sweet American rich girl is that of hankering to be a "lordess" or "duchess." The latest case is that of C. P. HUNTINGTON'S adopted daughter CLARA. She sighs for a coronet. She wants to be a princess, and so intense is her hankering in this respect that notwithstanding Prince HATZFELDT'S unsavory reputation, together with the fact that his great affection for her subsided on the strength of papa HUNTINGTON'S announcement that CLARA would only be allowed a modest income, she is willing to marry him. CLARA unquestionably is a sweet fool, and it is lucky for her that her adopted parent is a hard headed Connecticut Yankee.

Is it possible that we have in JOHN BURNS a philosopher and an honest man? Shall it so happen that the organs of the dockyards who have brayed loudly against the strike will be deprived of the sweet privilege of stigmatizing JOHN BURNS a demagogue? JOHN BURNS has declined to stand for the parliamentary vacancy of Dundee on the ground that it would look like taking reward for his labor during the strike. Here is modesty for you with a vengeance. It is said of BURNS that in his later speeches, he exhorted the men to treat the episode of the strike as the turning point of their existence, and to devote themselves to better lives. Not much danger of anarchy with such men as BURNS to lead the workingmen. If JOHN BURNS is not very careful he will find himself great with all his modesty and common sense.

Now that STANLEY seems certainly nearing the east coast of Africa the interest in his latest expedition is greatly increased. It is mainly a romantic interest, such as attaches to every story of travel and adventure in strange lands, of hardships endured, dangers passed and difficulties overcome. For there was nothing in the objects of the expedition to command much sympathy. The pretense of relieving EMIN, who did not need or desire relief, was merely a cover for an essentially commercial enterprise undertaken in the interest of traders looking to future profits. Incidentally such a march, however, helps to open the road by which civilization will enter the fastnesses of the Dark Continent, and so in serving greed a man like STANLEY serves human progress also. And what a fascinatingly interesting book the story of this last march across Africa will make!

GITWINTHGUL JIM.

An Indian Tragedy.

[Written for THE TIMES.]

They were on the way home from the feasts. Two dogs hauled and tugged at the heavy carriole to which was their baggage; other two curs carried daggled little side packs all awry. Mrs. Jim was loaded, too; Jim guiding the carriole. The younger boy straggled behind faint and weak; the elder lay dying of the fever on the load. Mrs. Jim showed herself in a new light.

"Man, it is not the fever. There are no spots on him. I tell you he is dying, and it is Neatsk who is stealing his spirit. Did he not say he would kill him?"

"It is your fault if he did."

"My fault! You take his side? I tell you you shall kill that man or I'll kill you and him too!"

"Don't talk nonsense."

"Nonsense!"

"Yes, nonsense. That boy is not my son, anyway. I don't believe you know who is his father."

Mrs. Jim was here taken aback. Jim asked too much. Presently she launched upon him with all the fury of a she fiend and kept it up until they reached Gitzegucla, dead tired that night. The elder boy was dying, the younger very sick. Later the elder boy was dead, the younger had the fever, and soon they were both dead. The woman waited and shrieked hour after hour. The rattling and howling of the doctors, the dog howling in the house over the bodies, the wailing night after night, day after day, over the graves, Jim was very heavy at heart. The woman was like a nightmare to him. He could not shake her off or stay her imperative cry for vengeance. His own boy, the one bright thing in his life, was dead, dead, and he brooded until his brain was fighting desperately against a shadow, and the shadow conquered and possessed him. His boy was gone; his blood cried to him for vengeance—the awful shadow vengeance — vengeance — foul abortion of death and night in a reeling brain.

Then that she fiend hissed in his ear, "Stay! Stay! Avenge me. Neatsk is boasting of his powers. He has gone to Gitwinthguk for fish oil. Go and slay! Here is my father's gun. Slay for me!"

He rose from the ground indignant, swore he would do no such thing, abused, aye, cursed her; and she in rage struck him in the face and called him a coward.

Then Jim went as in a dream to his native place and Neatsk was not there. Then he excused himself to his soul and said, "I can only go to get goods for the death feast, I must give over my boys." But yet he had the gun. As he went back on the long trail he repented that he had come, and soon thought of his child, and went along the way crying aloud a deep mourning for the dead. Presently he came to a long slope leading down to a brook, and then there came a voice up to him mocking him:

"Who is this crying and making a noise? Oh, you baby!"

There stood, in full range, a little stooped with the weight of his pack, a tall, wiry old man, grizzled and fierce looking. It was Neatsk.

Not knowing what he did, maddened by the sneering tone of his enemy, calling to mind how the man before him had murdered his child by foul sorcery, and had boasted of, Jim raised his gun to his shoulder, and shot Neatsk right through the body.

Then he went to Gitzegucla and gave the gun empty and foul with powder into the hand of his wife.

And now to Neatsk. The old chap came to the conclusion that even his profession was attended by certain drawbacks, and among other things it was unhealthy to threaten the evil eye during a fever epidemic. He knew also that one of his age is severely incommoded by a bullet in the body; and set to work to open correspondence with the environment of death, to which he had hurried many another in the course of his practice, but for which he had no relish himself.

You will perhaps suppose he commenced to rattle and shriek invocations. No such thing. That was of no avail unless it were paid for with at least a blanket a day. Neatsk walked right over the hill before the collapse came—reeling head, fearful heaviness, langor, and the sensation of swooning. The old man took off his pack, that pack of nice marmot skins with which he had been going to purchase oil of the oolachan or candle fish at Gitzegucla. The way from Skeena to Nass river by which he travelled is known to the barbarous as the "grease trail," on account of this traffic. Neatsk unpacked his marmots, dug away the snow and piled on either side, made a nice soft bed of fur, and lay a-groaning two days and a half.

Meanwhile Jim had given the gun to his wife, who clasped and plumed herself about the village, and to such an extent that Neatsk's friends convened and solemnly kicked Gitwinthgul Jim out of town, who thereupon made the one and a half or two days journey to his own village and told his uncle there that he had heard a groaning in the bush by the trail side.

Then three nephews and a niece of Dr. Neatsk's went out by night and came to the place where the groaning was, and found the brave old gentleman alive and cheery. To their cries of horror he said gently—

"Nay, children; may be I deserved it for sneering at a man's honest grief."

And as they carried him to the village, aye and as he lay a-dying, he never said one word about vengeance, but quietly passed away to his long sleep.

Jim was not welcome at Gitwinthgul. Nevertheless both he and his gentle partner dwelt there, the latter as cross as two sticks because Jim would insist on plunging and kicking all night, making a couch of but little ease for both. Neither was he of one mind for two hours at a time by day, but must needs be as restive as a bear on hot ashes. He was as suspish as a crab, and so absent minded that once he put the soap in her coffee pot in lieu of coffee, and then remorsefully threw away the spoiled water, soap included, and put the pot back on the fire empty. There was no bearing him.

Meanwhile at Gitzgucla the widow of the lamented Neatsk, on the day after his death, consoled herself by marrying his nephew and heir; and that matter being settled, she roused up all the other bereaved relatives and went with them to Gitwinthgul to claim compensation of Jim.

The village is perched on a hill and beneath came the mourners, howling like a dog at a concert. Moreover, Mrs. Neatsk howled out to Jim, condoling with him in his trouble, very sorry he had been put to the annoyance of shooting the old fool, and hoped he was not putting himself out over it, etc. The late doctor would have been much edified had he heard it. Then came Jim out of his house, laden with a great copper shield, charged with the escutcheon of his totems cut in copper lines on a black field, consisting of two vacuous eyes with an isosceles triangle sandwiched between, an array of teeth like a mediæval battlement doubled, and several other complex occult lines, the whole as unintelligible as a monogram. This presents the countenances of the ancestral bear, eagle, salmon or mink, according to the owner's persuasion, and its traditionary value is perhaps $200, albeit, a better could be made in Birmingham for $5. This shield, together with a bale of blankets, and two or three rifles Jim pitched down the hill side; whereupon the mourners seized the same and were instantly consoled. The murder was thus by Indian law paid for in full, and victims on such liberal terms can be had by the dozen. If a white man forsooth sells his soul to the devil and conforms to the usages of business, surely it is a thing for an Indian family to be ready to part with a dear relative or two, so that the murderer pays up decently when called on.

There now appears another character on the scene—the inevitable policeman. The gentleman's name is Washburn, a white man, then living at Hazleton, married to a niece of Mrs. Neatsk and very hostile towards Mr. and Mrs. Jim. He appears first in the matter as making the long journey to Victoria, and there reporting to the local government that the country was in a troubled condition and that there was a murderer at large named Jim. Further that two murders had also been committed at Kish-ka gish, a remote village of the Upper Skeena valley. Washburn left the capital a constable, with a party of four special constables and orders to assert the law on Skeena.

Jim heard of this and repaired to the house of his grandfather, towards Nass valley, taking with him Mrs. Jim and all the guns and ammunition he could procure. The amiable couple thus provisioned and fortified left the old man's shanty and declared war against the British Empire, and so continued until June, the commandant, the garrison, breathing defiance against all and sundry. Picture to yourself the commandant. A dusky, wooden-faced Indian, about thirty years old, rather below the middle height, strong as a bear, with long arms and big hands and feet, eyes small but rather pleasant by nature, and wide apart; nose rather squat, lips sensuous, jaw coarse, gaunt and scrubby. The man was dressed in nondescript European clothes, armed with a regular museum of old weapons; haggard and morose from anxiety and want of sleep; rather wild in the eyes and as cross as two sticks.

Mrs. Jim was—but, no, I will let you off.

Keep in your mind's eye the shanty beyond Gitwinthgul and its garrison and come to the Mission House, two miles above Gitwangek. It is a very cosy log house, with an open hearth in the front room, and would be a pleasant residence if it were not so shadowed by the low mountains across the river to the south, that the sun does not shine for two months in winter upon the little flat of Kshiandilleran. Bowered in a great mass of hops, the windows peep out on either side of the porch, looking through the cottonwood trees at the gleaming river and the impending mountain beyond.

Here before the hearth sits Special Constable Green, a Missourian, a good natured, rural, homespun looking man, perhaps thirty-five years old, large and muscular, bearded, fair, and of a dusky brown color. He wears a miserable little official cap, a uniform coat with brass buttons and an imposing array of weapons. Mr. Green speaks in pretty broad vernacular, is a great braggart and has a poetic soul. The valiant Washburn has been here a week ago when he had heard a rumor of Jim's escape to Nass river and returned to Hazelton leaving Green in charge. Now, on Monday, June 18th, Special Constables, Homans and Parker, must be on the road to join him and will probably arrive to-day and the three proceed to invade the formidable outlaw Jim in his stronghold.

CITY AND PROVINCE.

—It would be a gross injustice to confound that standard healing agent—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil—with the ordinary unguents, lotions and salves. They are oftentimes inflammatory and astringent. This oil is, on the contrary, eminently cooling and soothing when applied externally to relieve pain, and powerfully remedial when swallowed. *

—Mrs. E. H. Perkins, Creek Centre, Warren county, N. Y., writes: "She has been troubled with asthma for four years, had to sit up night after night with it. She has taken two bottles of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and is perfectly cured. She strongly recommends it, and wishes to act as agent among her neighbors." *

The Wrong House.

He was a keen, sharp looking young man, and he said to the lady of the house on Second avenue as he stood in the hall:

"Madam, I have called for the suit of clothes which needs brushing and fixing."

"What suit?" she asked.

"Your husband's Sunday suit, ma'am. He called as he went down this morning."

"And he said I was to let you have them?"

"Yes'm."

"Did he appear in good health and spirits?"

"Why, certainly."

"Look and act natural?"

"Of course. Why do you ask?"

"Because he has been dead eighteen years, and I have some curiosity on the subject!"

"I—I have made a mistake, perhaps!" stammered the young man.

"Perhaps you have. The man you saw go out of here an hour ago is my brother. You may have better luck in the next block with the old fashioned confidence game. Good morning!"—Detroit Free Press.

Age of Parents and Vitality of Children.

Mr. J. Korosi, director of the Hungarian bureau of statistics, recently read a memoir before the Hungarian Academy of Sciences upon the "Influence of the Age of Parents Upon the Vitality of Children," and in which, taking 24,000 cases as a basis, he reaches the following conclusions:

Children whose father is less than 20 years of age have a weak constitution. The issue of fathers of between 25 and 40 years are the strongest, while the descendants of fathers of over 40 years are weak. The healthiest children are those whose mother has not yet reached 35 years. Those born of mothers of between 35 and 40 years of age are 8 per cent. weaker, and those of mothers of over 40 are 10 per cent. weaker. The children of aged fathers and younger mothers have, as a general thing, a strong constitution; but if the parents are of the same age, the children are less robust.—Revue Scientifique.

Reformed Pronunciation.

The question of "What's in a name?" has been the subject of discussion around one of the principal hotels for some time, and an Englishman named Pugh is the cause of it. Mr. Pugh is an iron broker for some eastern or foreign concern, and more than this he is a thorough English cockney, to whom the letter H is an entirely useless invention. Two mutual friends of this gentleman met one day in the hotel and one asked the other if he had seen Pugh. The person questioned appeared not to know the gentleman by that name, and he asked: "Who?" "Why, that little Englishman; you know who I mean; Pugh; I have seen you talk with him more than once," replied the first. "Oh, you mean Pug," said the other; "he must be Pug according to his own pronunciation, for he always leaves off his Hs." Among a certain clique nowadays Mr. Pugh is only known as "Pug."—Chicago Herald.

Surprised Young Ladies.

Miss Celia Childs, of Seattle, was surprised, to say the least, when somebody dashed a bucket of cold water in her face as she was standing in a drug store. A hanging cigar lighter had touched off the inflammable forest of millinery surmounting her bonnet, and an excited clerk adopted that mode of extinguishing her.

One of the most accomplished young ladies of Selma, Ala., was hailed on the street by a bystander, who very politely knocked a rat off her bustle, where it was enjoying a delightful ride. As the varmint struck the ground and the lady saw that it was actually a live rat, she had a lively foot race for some distance.—Washington Avalanche.

PERSONAL.

Items Telling of Movements of Well Known Persons.

Dixi A. Ross, who fell from a pile of boxes in his store on Friday last and fractured a rib, is still confined to his residence. We are pleased to learn, however, that he is improving rapidly and that he expects to resume business in the course of a few days.

Sam Gray came down from Chemainus to-day without wings. At the depot he was met by a number of old timers who inquired about the other world.

S. M. Robins, of the Vancouver Coal Co., came down on this afternoon's train.

T. A. Cresse, of Vancouver, will leave on the bark Titania for England. Mr. Cresse has been very ill and has been advised by the doctors to make the trip for the benefit of his health.

T. S. Bone, who has been over a year in England, is on his way home.

TEMPEST IN A TEAPOT.

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir—The Colonist in raising a hue and cry about the improvements at the park uses my name very freely in connection with matters that I have nothing whatever to do with. I am not an alderman, nor a politician or office seeker nor am I seeking any public position. I have simply been giving my time and money in a small way towards improving the park, because I feel an interest in anything that is for the welfare and benefit to our fair city. A short time ago when I made a proposition to the council to donate 1000 trees to the park the Colonist, in its usual spirit, tried to throw cold water on the project though there was no sense nor reason in doing so. In raising a suitable number of trees I was assisted by a few generous hearted citizens whose names will be given at the proper time. In conclusion, I wish to say that if the present design is carried out, with slight additions, we will have the most beautiful park on the continent.

J. Heywood.

BEACON HILL PARK.

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—I read with much pleasure last evening Mr. Mallandaine's still more frantic endeavors to place himself in the light of a martyr before the public. It is still more evident to me that that gentleman is not acting from purely unselfish motives, and I would like to ask him a question, through you, viz.: Is it not true that he sent in a plan and bid on the work of beautifying the park, and having failed to get the contract feels sore about it? What I, as well as others want to know is, "What does Mr. Mallandaine know about landscape gardening?" As an architect he is efficient, and anyone who would say he did not know anything about his profession in that branch would be saying what is not true. My opinion is that he knows little or nothing about gardening, landscape or otherwise, and in endeavoring to spoil a good man's work he is doing a wrong thing. Let him stick to his own trade and leave other men to theirs.

Funeral.

The remains of the late Wm. Hardy were interred this afternoon, the Rev. John Reid, D. D., officiating. The pall bearers were: J. P. Miller, B. Roscoe, F. Beegan, J. Paul, C. E. Stewart and E. R. Mitchel.

The Tramway.

The customs duty on 390 tons of rails for the National Electric tramway, amounting to $1800, was paid to-day. This consignment will cover a distance of five miles and a start on laying them will be commenced in a few days from the present time.

Conversazione.

The ladies of the Reformed Episcopal church will hold a conversazione this (Tuesday) evening in the Sunday school room of the church. Refreshments will be served. Admission 25 cents. The young ladies will hold a sale of work,—useful and fancy.

To Be Sold.

The trustees of the Royal Hospital property have decided to offer the property for sale at auction within a short time. There have been tenders offered for the property at different times, but the terms were not satisfactory to the trustees, who have chosen the plan as above to dispose of it.

A Large Cargo.

The steamer Michigan's cargo for Portland consisted of 18,000 cases of salmon. The salmon will be shipped over the Oregon short line and Union Pacific to Montreal, St. John, N. B., and Halifax. There will be sixty carloads, and it is said this is the largest shipment of salmon by rail that ever left British Columbia.

Off to the East.

The schooner Adele, sails to-night for Yokohama. The Adele is a stout little craft of 50 tons, commanded by Captain Hanson, a brave and skilful mariner. Mr. H. R. A. Pocock, the well known newspaper correspondent, leaves on her for the purpose of seeing the east and studying this kind of marine life.

The Industrial Fair.

The industrial fair at Portland opens on Thursday the 26th and continues thirty days. Round trip tickets, via Tacoma, good for nine days, will be issued at the low price of $9; while tickets good for thirty days will be issued for $16. No doubt many Victorians will avail themselves of this opportunity to visit Portland and take in the great industrial exhibition.

The Provincial Exhibition.

The agricultural exhibition and celebration which will take place at New Westminster next week promises to be one of the greatest affairs of the kind ever seen in the province. Preparations are being made on a very large scale for the reception and entertainment of visitors as well as for the proper care of exhibits. It is to be hoped that the farmers and manufacturers of Vancouver Island will make the best possible show they can as it is important to this part of the province.

Bricks from Japan.

A scow load of brick from Japan, the first ever brought to Puget Sound, has arrived at Seattle. It contained 100,000, and each brick has the name of the maker stamped in with Japanese letters. A teaship brought it as ballast across the Pacific and unloaded it at Tacoma, whence it was reshipped to Seattle. Bricklayers pronounce it a very fine brick, as it is one third larger in size than the brick made here. The brick-buyers like the appearance of it, but not the price, which is $20.50 a thousand.

Sunday Closing.

A petition is being circulated for signatures, which will be presented to the city council, asking that a by-law be passed prohibiting the sale of all intoxicating liquors between the hours of 12 o'clock on Saturday night and 12 o'clock on Sunday night. The advocates of Sunday closing are more numerous and more influential than a few years ago, when a similar measure was discussed, and the movement will therefore meet with more general approval. The petition, which was started yesterday, already contains a number of signatures.

St. Andrew's Church Tower.

Work was recommenced on the St. Andrew's church tower yesterday, operations having been stopped for a few days to allow the structure to settle. It will now be carried on to completion on the imposing scale originally designed by the architect. The usual number of Jeremiahs, who wear out their lives bewailing the mistakes of other people, have given a good deal of attention to the tower of late, when not occupied with Beacon Hill Park. But the builder will finish the work, for all that, even though the Jeremiahs should not be able to sleep over it.

Annual Convocation.

The annual convocation of Columbia Royal Arch Chapter took place yesterday afternoon, when the following officers were elected: M. E. Comp., A. McKeown 1st Prin. Z; M. E. Comp., B. Williams, 2nd Prin. H; M. E. Comp., T. B. Pearson, 3rd Prin. J; W. J. Quinlan, Scribe E. R.; C. E. Renouf, Scribe N.; E. J. Salmon, Treas.; W. R. Brown, 1st Soj.; M. McGregor, 2nd Soj.; E. Langley, 3rd Soj.; G. G. Pulchea, Organist; A. Stewart, Dir. of Cer.; Thos. Cuniff, janitor.

At 8 eight o'clock in the evening the installation of officers took place, at the conclusion of which a supper was partaken of.

Fruit Growing.

"British Columbia," says the Mail, "is turning out to be a magnificent fruit-growing province. One of the provincial papers declares that there is a market for all the fruit that can be produced, and every person who will come and engage in the industry will be welcome." The above statement is quite correct. British Columbia is emphatically a fruit-growing country. Good grapes can be raised here as well as apples, peaches and plums. We want fruit raisers, however, of the kind who can compete against California and Oregon, men who understand how to make fruit grow as cheaply as the fruit raisers in the States mentioned. It is strange, passing strange, that with a soil and climate adapted for fruit the consumer must pay twelve and a half cents a pound for what he consumes of it.

A Detective Arrested.

W. T. Dunstan, of the Victoria detective agency, was arrested this afternoon, on the complaint of Ah Lim, a Chinaman, who charges him with obtaining the sum of three dollars under false pretenses. The Chinaman's story is somewhat vague as to the circumstance which led up to Dunstan obtaining the money. Dunstan states that the Chinaman wanted to get into the United States, and said he was a merchant of this city. He had to be identified as such and told Dunstan he would give him $10 if he would find one Lim Kee, who did business in this city. Dunstan agreed to do so, but on the following morning Ah Lim could only give him three dollars. Dunstan instituted a search for Lim Kee, but could not find him, whereupon the Chinaman had him arrested as stated above. Dunstan was released in his own recognizance in the sum of $100. The case will be heard in the police court to-morrow morning.

SEVERELY INJURED.

Sheriff McMillan Thrown out of a Buggy Yesterday.

About half-past five o'clock last evening Sheriff McMillan was returning home on the Craigflower road in his two-wheel vehicle, in company with a lady, and while driving leisurely along was startled by the cry of "lookout" from behind. The spot was the eminence of the hill descending to the Four-mile House, and the occupant of the buggy who halloed came dashing along from behind, and although he had ample room to pass so unskilfully was his horse managed that it collided with the Sheriff's vehicle overturning it and throwing both occupants out. The Sheriff was severely cut over the eye and suffered a wrenched back. The lady alighted on the form of her prostrate companion and escaped injuries. Mr. Conway, of the Four-mile House, hitched up a buggy and brought the Sheriff and the lady to town.

After upsetting, the Sheriff's horse started at a rapid gait down the hill, but was stopped after crossing Craigflower bridge. The other vehicle was broken into many pieces. The party who is responsible for the accident is a stranger, but enquiries will be made as to his whereabouts.

ABOUT ALASKA.

Wonderful Richness and Magnificent Scenery—Tacoma Trade.

A prominent citizen of Sitka who is in Tacoma gives the following description of it: The immense sale of land to the government, which is now known as Alaskan territory, is one of vast wealth and importance. A better idea of the immensity of that territory, as it is now called, may be had when we consider that it is nearly eight hundred miles square and contains nearly six hundred thousand square miles. No one will doubt but that the United States got land enough for its money when Alaska was purchased. It cannot be said that the entire territory is good for either agricultural or mining pursuits. The discovery of gold, silver and other metals, which are constantly taking place, gives it a prospective financial value, which will eventually be one of the foremost districts of the union.

From an artistic point of view Alaska is certainly advanced in an eminent degree with that which all countries possessing it value most highly, viz.: magnificent scenery.

It would be difficult to transcribe the thoughts and emotions of one visiting Alaska for the first time. Its incomparably grand scenery, as you sail northward through the labyrinth of islands, girted on every side by fresh beauties which have the merit of purely natural magnificence, challenges one's admiration, and the stock of adjectives fail, before you half describe its towering snow-capped peaks, its icy glaciers, and its rough and rugged sea coast. It is indeed the "Switzerland of America."

It is not my object to laud this territory, but to merely give you an insight of its natural resources, which have been the inducements which have promoted the large trade between Alaska and other parts.

When the grasping hands of the monopolists leave off their firm grip upon this trade, you can easily see what will be the natural result. It will be distributed all over the country, and instead of buying in San Francisco, the most of the trade will come to Tacoma, which is now gaining rapidly among the affections of the Alaskans. The part which Tacoma has held in the past, though small, will rapidly increase and become one of the leading commercial centers of the coast. This city has made great progress in this trade and she is steadily increasing, and before long will surely down the monopolistic wall which incloses Alaska, and will be the means of opening an extensive and wealthy commercial intercourse with that rich territory.

PROVINCIAL COURT.

(Before Robt. Ward, J. P.)

Alexander Vey, charged by summons with intending to injure and kill John B. Sere, on the Richmond road, on the 18th inst.

John B. Sere deposed that he saw Vey pulling down two pickets and one board from a fence on his property; he then got into witness' land; witness shouted out, "get out, what right have you there;" defendant then left my place and picked up two large stones and called Sere out into the road and said, "you d—d Frenchman. I will kill some of them d—d Frenchmen. If you want to be a dead man come out here." Witness did not go, but told defendant "to go to bed, that he was beastly drunk, a drunken beast, a raving maniac, a rowdy lunatic and a lazy good-for-nothing." On examination by Mr. Fell, counsel for defendant, the witness did not know what the trouble was about, but said Vey complained about water running through his place and that Vey had a right to it, though witness sometimes blocked the water up; witness shot defendant's dog for biting the former's wife.

The court bound Vey over in his own recognizance to keep the peace for six months in the sum of $100 and to pay $5 costs.

John B. Sere, charged by summons with intending to injure and kill Alex. Vey on the 18th inst. The charge was not prosecuted.
